

Imaging

In Business your image is important ...

System imaging is a service where we take one of your fully configured machines and capture an exact 'image' of its hard drive. Then, whenever you require more PCs, the image can be downloaded onto the new machines, giving you a consistent machine configuration.

Once the image has been downloaded, our engineers can then further customise each machine individually (changing its system name, IP address or NT SID, for example) if required.

You can either supply us with the 'typical' machine, or we can work with you to configure it for your business and network environment. Together, we can ensure that every PC has everything that it needs on its hard drive - and, just as importantly, nothing it doesn't need.

..... So is keeping it up to date with the latest developments

It seems that every day, new software is released... hardware specifications can change... and configurations need reviewing constantly.

Keeping up to date with every upgrade release and hardware enhancement in IT is a full-time job in itself. That's why we check all new machines for compatibility with your image, to ensure the software being installed is correct and suitable for your requirements, we also routinely check for any software updates that may be required at the time.

In addition system changes brought about by hardware and software manufacture, there will be occasions where you may require, additional applications or new functionality.

Whatever may happen, we will forward you a full report of suggested changes to the master image for approval and a complete change history log will be maintained.

Let Comcen Professional Services look after your business Image and pre configuration....

Here at Comcen we understand that your IT team have far more important things to do than waste time on testing, configuring or fault finding on new equipment.

Our in house engineers can pre configure and test your equipment before it leaves our logistics centre, installing additional memory, Hard Drives, or graphics cards for example, ensuring it reaches you ready to deploy.

Leaving your IT team deal with more business critical issues.....
