

VOIP

For some companies talk is cheap . . .

Many organisations in the UK are now taking advantage of the benefits that are available by migrating their telephony needs across to an IP based network.

They are enjoying greater flexibility, increased productivity and more functionality, whilst achieving real hard and soft cost savings across their communication needs.

..... What are the benefits?

Naturally most organisations main reason to migrate to an IP communication network is to reduce the total cost of ownership (TCO) and these can be broadly based into four areas: Multi site savings, management / maintenance savings, Physical infrastructure savings and soft savings.

For example, an organisation can save around 40% on cabling, by reducing the number of cables run to desktop to one, savings of between 75% and 100% can be realised in an all IP network via MAC (move, add and change of systems), reduction or elimination of costs to maintain stand alone voice systems.

Multi site organisations can expect further savings over and above these by enjoying dedicated point to point inter office traffic, reducing the number of trunks connected to the public switched telephone network (PSTN), savings on international traffic and there is also the flexibility of remote or teleworking of staff, being able to offer them the same seamless functionality as being in the office but from a remote location.

In a nutshell moving partly or totally to an IP communication solution can offer you reduced costs along with greater flexibility and control.
